He held that the only question for them to decide was that of crime or no crime; and further that no action could be so considered in connection with which evil intention was not brought. He illustrated this proposition by considering a homicide committed by a madman, by the supposition that the President should violate the law after losing his reason, and by reference to the acts of Mr. Lincoln in constituting the military tribunals in the loyal states, which conduct though pronounced destitute of warrant by the Supreme Court, had been upheld by Congress on the ground that the motive was good; having thus, as he claimed, shown the falsity of the doctrine advanced by the Manngers on that subject. He said he should consider the question whether the President had a right to remove Mr. Stanton and grant a letter of authority General Thomas, for on these two issues hung the fate of eight of the articles. As to the first points he held that the civil tenure law did not apply to Mr. Stanton because he was not appointed by Mr. Johnson, but even if Mr. Johnson is not serving his own but Mr. Lincoln, s term, Mr. Stanton's tenure office expired one month after the expiration of his first term, and if Mr. Lincoln was now living Mr. Stanton if the latter is merely serving out the remainder of the term. The Chief Justice stated that the first business in order was the order offered by Mr. Edmunds yesterday, to admit the official reporters to report the proceedings on the final question.

Mr. Edmunds at the suggestion of several Senators, moved to pospone it until Monday.

Mr. Drake moved its indefinite postponement, which was rejected—25 against 27.

The motion to postpone it until Monday was agreed to.

Mr. Summer offered the folling order: "Ordered, that the Senate, sitting for the trial of Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, will proceed to vote on the several articles of impeachment at 12 o'clock on the day after the close of argument.

Senator Johnson objected, and it was laid over.

Mr. Summer—I send to the Chair two additional rules, the first of which is derived from the practice of the Senate on the articles of impeachment, the presiding officer shall call each Senator by his name, and upon each strick propose the following question in the manner following: "Mr.—How say you, is the respondent guilty or not guilty as charged in the article of impeachment?" Whereupon each Senator shall rise in his place and answer, "guilty" or, "not guilty."
